Dino Antonopoulos is a member of the Business and Real Estate Practice Groups with nearly 20 years of legal experience. Known for his exceptional communication, strong client advocacy, and consistent success in achieving favorable outcomes, Dino began his career with invaluable courtroom experience representing closely held businesses and financial institutions in complex commercial litigation, including high-stakes, seven-figure jury trials. This early litigation experience, combined with his deep understanding of client needs, naturally led Dino to expand his practice into the transactional realm.

Dino applies his insights from litigation to the fields of business, real estate, and finance, where he skillfully addresses issues and creates solutions in transactions such as drafting governing documents and structuring asset purchase agreements for company acquisitions. He represents financial institutions and a range of closely held businesses across diverse industries, including manufacturing, distribution, retail, development, construction, real estate brokerage, and service sectors.

As outside general counsel for closely held companies, Dino provides in-depth advisory and consulting services, focusing on complex issues and developing both strategic and practical solutions tailored to his clients' needs.
